

The retail industry is fast-paced, highly competitive, and a potential minefield in terms of risk. The combination of sales transactions, stock management, interaction with the public, management of staff and upkeep of premises represents a perfect storm for liability and exposure, so adequate retail insurance is essential.

No two retailers are the same, which is why 'one size fits all' policies and online comparison sites simply do not work for this sector. Online retailers in particular shouldn't underestimate the risks that they are exposed to, and should have risk management procedures in place like any other retail business.

This is where Robison & Co. can help. Our retail sector specialists will take time to understand the exact needs of your business, identifying areas of risk, and recommending policies that will reduce your exposure without breaking your budget.

This is why selecting the right broker to act on your behalf is essential to minimising your risk and protecting what you have built.

You need trusted, intelligent advisors who understand your sector and can provide professional, perceptive guidance in straightforward, easy to understand terms. You need people who make the process of buying insurance simple, whilst providing peace of mind that you, your business and your people are adequately protected.
